GREENSBORO.

(Geo. A. Porter, Correspondent.)

At the lake the cottages are beginning to show life. The season has been so cold and backward that most of the people who come early, have this year delayed. The Sanborns came June 22, and are located as usual at Birch Lodge. The Stones, except the professor, who is teaching at Hampton, have been here since the first of June. The Elchebergers, Drs. George and Gilman Wheeler with their families have just arrived. The war has made a great change. There is but one young man from 18 to 30 here, and he has enlisted. Many of the cottages have been leased, and new faces are being seen on the streets. The fishing could hardly be worse.

A BAD SPRING FOR WOMEN.

The late, cold and damp spring seems to have been particularly severe on the health of women, and many are suffering from backache, rheumatic pains, aches and pains in sides, joints and muscles, numbness and other ailments caused by overwork or disordered kidneys or bladder. Mrs. T. J. Bucknell, Hardy, Neb., writes: "I am recovering from an attack of numbness by the aid of Foley Kidney Pills. They surely help me. Women seem peculiarly liable to kidney trouble, and no symptom should be neglected."

Green Mountain Grange Meeting.

On Friday evening, June 29, the members of Green Mountain Grange No. 1, their families and invited guests to the number of 200 or more met at their hall to celebrate the payment of their indebtedness and to witness the burning of the mortgage. The hall was very tastefully decorated with crepe paper, flags and cut flowers. The exercises were opened with a voluntary followed immediately by the rendering of "Mother's Song," by a quartet. Then came the address of welcome by Worthy Master W. J. Henderson, who gave a history of granges. He stated that the origin of Green Mountain Grange No. 1 dated back to the fall and winter of 1870, when his father, the late Jonathan Lawrence, after reading an account of the grange in a newspaper, wrote for information. The result was the institution of this grange on July 4, 1871. It was not only the first grange instituted in this State, but the first in New England. Next came the history of the building of the hall, by Mrs. Nellie E. Whitney. After this came the event of the evening, the burning of the mortgage by its oldest member, Eliza A. Allen. As with her lighted candle, she set fire to the mortgage a lively little song entitled "Merrily Sing," was rendered, and as the mortgage crumbled to ashes a long and hearty applause rang out. The following program was rendered: Reading, "Laska," Mrs. P. W. Stearns, who responded to an encore with "A Grateful Man"; duet, "Alone in Love's Garden," the Misses Rae and Shirley Aske, accompanied by Leslie Moyle, piano, and Charlotte F. McLaughlin, violin, responding to an encore with "Jauntia"; reading, "The Hero of the Hill," Mrs. Oscar Cummings of St. Johnsbury, responding to an encore she gave "One of Job's Comforters"; solo, "My Wonderful Love in Thee," Mrs. Lulu Twombly, responding to an encore with "Croon Time"; reading, "Aunt Shaw's Pet Jug," Mrs. Etta Prescott, solo; "In the Sunshine of Your Smile," Miss Katherine Morrison of St. Johnsbury, responding to an encore with "I'm Longing for You." Brief remarks of much interest were made at this time by Worthy Past State Lecturer E. H. Hallut, who at the present time is worthy master of Wide-Awake Grange No. 66. In referring to the decline of the grange he said much credit was due to Alpha Messer, Hon. C. J. Bell and others for their untiring efforts and faithfulness in the work of organization and the upbuilding of the grange along educational lines, and today the grange had become the greatest and best agricultural organization in the world. Piano solo, "Convent Bells," Leslie Moyle, responding to an encore with "Within the Swing"; reading, "How Jonathan Helped John," Stella E. Allen; solo, "Mother Macree," Miss Katherine Morrison; dramatic reading, "In the Sign of the Cross," Rev. R. S. Caldwell; reading, "My Warnings," Mrs. Oscar Cummings. Each of the last numbers received an encore, but as the hour was getting late no more responded. The exercises were closed by all rising and singing "America." Immediately following the close of the exercises refreshments of meat loaf, rolls, cake, coffee and ice cream were served in the dining room, when dancing and a social hour was enjoyed by all.
